June 2015

Artist’s Statement: Recognizing the Interdisciplinary Journal of Partnership Studies Taking Flight

Stephen Nesser

Follow this and additional works at: http://pubs.lib.umn.edu/ijps

Recommended Citation

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial 4.0 License

The Interdisciplinary Journal of Partnership Studies is published by the University of Minnesota Libraries Publishing. Authors retain ownership of their articles, which are made available under the terms of a Creative Commons Attribution Noncommercial license (CC BY-NC 4.0).
ARTIST’S STATEMENT:

RECOGNIZING THE INTERDISCIPLINARY JOURNAL OF PARTNERSHIP STUDIES TAKING FLIGHT

Stephen Nesser MFA

Life Partners at Twilight

Watercolor on paper (2015)

It was winter’s twilight. The highlights deepened to turquoise and the shadows to ultramarine blue. Two southbound tundra swans banked northward into the chill wind and glided silently over an open stretch of the Mississippi River. With their wing tips nearly touching, they stopped flapping simultaneously, turned at the same instant, touched down, and settled into the night side by side.

Common things touch me. What could be more common than a bird in flight? Yet the swans’ flight in perfect unison bespoke trust, practice, skill, and intimacy all in a silent few seconds. Side-by-side they were perfect partners, each heeding the other. Their complex flight appeared effortless, so perfect was their partnership. I was awestruck.

I am a student of the Japanese aesthetic of wabi-sabi. Wabi-sabi recognizes that all things corrode, crumble, or die. It reveres authenticity and honors all things imperfect and incomplete. Or, to say it another way, it cherishes the beauty of things modest and humble.

This watercolor painting tries to capture the “witching light” of sunset to honor the common and perfect flight of mated-for-life tundra swans. Their steadfast partnership at the end of the day and the year is worthy of being honored. I hope my painting says: I witnessed you and I offer this painting as a small tribute to your common perfection. I will remember the profound teaching of your ordinary life.